these essays explore the processes of change in indian society over the period from about the seventh to the thirteenth century departing radically from the current historiography on the period the author posits change as represented by processes of progressive transformation not by the breakdown of an earlier social order within this framework he discusses such diverse themes as irrigation urbanization the formation of a dominant ruling caste and the structure of polity in general india is generally regarded as a civilization with a set of intrinsic attributes that emerged in the age of the vedas or better still in the harappan times in recent decades historical studies have moved away from rigid perspectives of singularity in origin and expansion the emphasis now is on pluralities and long term processes spanning centuries and millennia there is also an influential school of thought which rejects antiquity claims such as these and holds that india is a construct of the colonial and nationalist imagination in his radical reinterpretation of india s past manu v devadevan moves away from these reifying assessments to examine the evolution of institutions ideas and identities that are characterized typically as indian in lieu of endorsing their indianness he traces their emergence to specific conditions that developed in india between 600 and 1200 ce a period which historians now call the early medieval this book changes the way we look at the history of early medieval india c 600 1300 ce deftly tackling issues of periodization and continuities it highlights the complex and multilineal nature of historical processes from feudalism and state formation and economic and social structures in villages and cities to explorations in religion art and intellectual history of the period this book sheds light on the economic political and cultural history of the pre sultanate and non sultanate early medieval india economic history of early medieval northern india is an attempt to present the picture of agrarian formation and economic changing which early medieval india had experienced this book is a comprehensive and systematic study of the economic institutions such as agriculture types of crops nature of peasantry land grants internal and domestic trade urban concept forced labour and paucity of coins etc the book does not claim to present a general economic history of early medieval india in the traditional manner the distinctive characteristic of this book lies in the fact that it present the thesis of economic development and changes which took place during the period of study an attempt has been made to make an evolution of the one of the most critical periods of indian history with main focus on agrarian structure and economic institutions the study has been based both on the literary and epigraphical sources the book therefore present a deteriorating grim scenario about the agricultural and economic condition of the historical period spanning from 8th century to 10th century a d it also traces the causal complexities which forced the peasant to accept their fate passively and without a murmur illustrations 4 maps description the book outlines the origin and development of the practice of pilgrimage in india between ad 300 and 1200 and draws extensively on epigraphic and literary data particularly the puranic corpus to delineate the growing popularity of the ritual spatially and chronologically viewing religion as part of the social process it seeks to explore linkages between new religious trends and changes taking place in the material conditions of life although there are a few references to pilgrimage centres in inscriptions of the early second century the number of these destinations rapidly multiplied from the fourth fifth centuries coinciding meaningfully with widespread decay and desertion of urban places in an age of political disintegration and social insularity religious congregations served as the nucleus of cultural bonding alongside of decaying towns cult sites relating to forests hill tracts deserts river banks sea coasts crossroads all surfaced as pilgrimage centres of some sort with an attendant increase in the number of myths and legends sanctifying these places with the emergence of temple as the focal point of social processes even large villages and marginal political centres also emerged as places of pilgrimage a thrust area of the ritual was the changing nature of the gift exchange system gifts largely agricultural goods and inputs during the gupta and post gupta times were necessary if one wished to acquire religious merit and drive away the impurities of deeds and thoughts entailing loss of social status charities performed at the sacred places were considered all the more beneficial the idea that religious merit ensured a comfortable afterlife and that dying in places sanctified by gods and god men brought instant religious merit encouraged the practice of committing self immolation at the holiest of pilgrimage centres
