academic paper from the year 2016 in the subject health public health grade 2 Egerton University public health language English abstract the healthcare reform was regarded to as the biggest in the history of the United States for over 40 years and it ushered in a new phase of the U.S. healthcare system in a nutshell the recent healthcare reforms aim at enhancing access to healthcare services by all U.S. citizens by embarking on fundamental healthcare policy approaches that create universal healthcare they are also intended to reduce the cost of healthcare across the country it is believed that the quest for the introduction of the healthcare reform was occasioned by the inefficiency of the old healthcare system in which access to healthcare services by the U.S. citizens was somehow difficult in the old healthcare system only some few selected groups were able to access healthcare services under government-funded healthcare programmes healthcare coverage involved Medicare and Medicaid government-funded healthcare programmes through which the aged and the low-income populations could access medical services in public healthcare institutions government-run schemes enabled military veterans to access medical services whereas the state children's health insurance programmes catered for the children of the uninsured parents in addition the national health insurance fund which is an employer-funded health insurance offered access to healthcare for the employed population on the basis of salary deductions from their monthly income seminar paper from the year 2018 in the subject health public health grade 78 00 course IRPM language English abstract health care delivery systems and financing structures are some of the most popular across the globe when it comes to the wellbeing of the human race the resultant popularity is influenced by the significance of universal healthcare and the efficiency levels attributed to healthcare delivery financing and accessibility among other factors all countries are inherently predisposed to have unique healthcare financing and delivery systems due to assorted issues such as political history culture economic and demographic factors in particular health care in the united kingdom and the united states has been at the centre of political social and cultural debate in the past few years this book tells the story of the united states healthcare system which is built by and for the opportunistic motives of powerful corporations politicians and government initiatives it answers questions that most people have about why it is that american healthcare claims to be the best in the world yet americans do not enjoy the longest or healthiest lives why is it that the united states spends much more on its healthcare system but gets less in return how did the united states develop a healthcare system that is expensive hard to use and seems to be guided by profit seeking corporations instead of the health needs of the people how did the us healthcare system respond to the covid 19 pandemic and what did the pandemic teach us about the strengths and weaknesses of the american way of health care legislators health care students consumers policy makers and advocates for health care justice can take this book as an introduction to the failing health care system that the author calls a threat to national security research paper postgraduate from the year 2016 in the subject health public health grade 15 egerton university language english abstract in the recent years the close relationship between the united states and the united kingdom seem reflect in most developmental areas these two countries seem to learn from one another in advancing their strategies towards healthcare sustainability one of these areas is the healthcare formosa post reaffirms that the us has copied many of its systems from the uk and this is attributable to historical reasons however it is worth noting that there are significant organizational differences in the healthcare system structures that define the success and reliability of each system in retrospect the uk s healthcare system commonly known as the national health service is reported to perform relatively better compared to the us healthcare system according healthcare studies objective indicators show significant developments within these two healthcare systems despite their organizational differences overall the us healthcare consumes a high percentage of the national gross domestic product than the uk healthcare system budgetary allocations for healthcare in both countries show that uk spends about 8 of the country s gross domestic product compared to the 15 share consumed by the us healthcare despite these difference in financing the two healthcare systems the quality of medical services are more or less the same however these systems have not yet achieved high performing competencies in population health as it is the case with sweden and japan which are ranked the world s high performing healthcare systems as measured by life expectancy and infant mortality this collection of essays examines the consequence of expanding behavioral healthcare within the context of current healthcare delivery and proposed models of universal care seminar paper from the year 2018 in the subject health public health grade 1 egerton university language english abstract the united states seems to be experiencing enormous challenges in public healthcare despite the numerous healthcare reforms which have been enforced to enhance healthcare sustainability for instance the current burden of disease caused by obesity and its related health conditions appear to have become a potential healthcare problem because the u s government has been spending colossal amounts of revenue to the healthcare sector to mitigate the issue recent healthcare reports indicate that obesity consumes the highest percentage of healthcare expenditure and this probably so because obesity and its related health conditions such as cardiovascular disease the heart disease and diabetes have been ranked among the top five leading causes of mortality in the u s in addition other non communicable diseases such as cancer and arthritis are also exerting intense pressure on the u s healthcare system secondly the lack of national health insurance has emerged to be another significant challenge to the u s healthcare leading to the unprecedented surge of healthcare cost and inaccessibility to healthcare services healthpac 2013 states 75 of all health care dollars are spent on patients with one or more chronic conditions many of which can be prevented including diabetes obesity heart disease lung disease high blood pressure and cancer currently there are about 48 million uninsured people in the united states which translates to 16.3% of the total u s population denavas walt et al 2012 it is surprising that the u s is one of the wealthy industrialized nations in the world but it does not have a universal healthcare system which involves national health insurance and this has led numerous healthcare consequences healthpac 2013 therefore this research will give an overview on the lack of national health insurance in the united states ideally the public fund behind this insurance would be derived from a progressive income tax book jacket
